

(W)HOLE IN THE WORLD

© 2014 Bob Sima Music, Believe the Bird, Released March 2014

There's a hole in the world; there's a hole in our hearts, it's a crack so familiar we wonder
Where do you end, and where do we start

There's a tear in our eye, it's the same one that the mother cries
When she's sad and can't find her smile, like she cries when she fears she's lost her baby inside

Like a word to the wise
In a room full of mirrors it's so hard to hide
There's not a branch that survives the fall of the tree
There's not a heart that won't break when their eyes finally see

There's a word on your tongue begging to be said but it ain't very fun
To drop down your shield, admit when you're wrong, take the time to rewind and rewrite the song

Remember why we're here
It's not just to get our fill then disappear
There's not a branch that survives the fall of the tree
There's not a heart that won't break when their eyes finally see

Finally see out the new window with a softness in our hearts doing the dance we used to know
You are the music, we are in perfect time, hand in hand, eye to eye, and marvelously intertwined

As a hummingbird dances backwards with gravity
The cornfields sway with the westerly wind's rhapsody
I could swear once I saw a turtle he laughed at me
But the speed I was going, the sound never made it back to me
Until I sat down in the grass, sat there so quietly
Then finally it reached me... finally, finally

We're not the story here only part of the tale, just a drop not the ocean, a drip in the pail
She's our home, she's our mother, and we can't trade her for another
When she's got trouble, we got double
She's a force not a resource, we're the only recourse
When we take more than our share, far more than expected
Everything's affected, because everything's connected
There's more to the puzzle than our own little needs
We can't change her plans, or alter her seeds

There's a whole of the world, there's a whole of our hearts, the connection so clear we wonder
Where do you end and where do we start

There's a star in the sky brilliantly shining hope in our eyes
And the reflection of the moon over the sea, it's a call to the hearts and the souls of you and me
To take just a moment; take a deep breath as one
Remember some things we do can't be undone

Why we're here
Not just to get our fill then disappear
There's not a branch that survives the fall of the tree
And not a heart that won't break open when their eyes finally see

Page 1 of 1

© Bob Sima Music

Lyrics: "(W)hole in the World"

www.bobsima.com

